How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like aches and headaches which are the result of functional periodic pain. Here's how it may help:

1. Takes like a candy. It is pleasant to take. It is not a medicine. It is a liquid medicine.
2. Starts 3 days before the period. It should bring relief from the cramp-like aches and headaches which are the result of functional periodic pain.

Look for the Cardui logo on the wrapper. It's the only one with a woman's face.

11-Year-Old Boy Genius

Composes New Symphony
TALLAHASSEE, Fla., (Society)—Grade, sandy-haired, wide-eyed Ryan Edwards, 11, of Quincy, Fla., has just completed a new symphony, "The Emperor's New Clothes," which will be presented by the Florida State university orchestra.

Acclaimed by Dean Karl Kuersteiner of the Florida State university's school of music as a genius, Ryan was accepted as a special student. He travels 25 miles from his home to the university once a week for his lessons.

Ryan, who has been composing since he was 8, started his family by picking out an original tune on the piano after he had had only a few lessons.

"Gosh, I don't know. I just did," he said.

His grandmother, a music teacher of many years experience, instructed him for about eight months until it was evident he had outstripped her knowledge.

He studied independently for a year and a half. Then his parents, urged by friends, brought him to the university.

New York Seeks to Legalize Beauty Parlors for Its Men
ALBANY, N. Y.—A woman legislator here advocated a New York State law to make it legal for men to patronize beauty parlors.

Assemblyman Grimes M. Strong said that if men "want to go to beauty parlors for treatments they should be able to do it within the law."

The legislator reported that while talking to a hairdresser about such treatments for building men she factually remarked:
"I suppose some men feel they need permanent waves, too."
"That's true," replied the hairdresser, "and some men even come here to have their eyebrows plucked."
A year-old state law requiring licenses for beauty parlors prohibits hairdressers from working on any but female heads.

Museum Visitor Hides Under Lincoln's Bed to Get Guns

CHICAGO — Museum guards at the Chicago Historical society museum now even look under Abraham Lincoln's bed before locking up for the night.
The guards decided it would be wise when Roger Anderson, 34, arrested after a streetcar motorman complained he had been waving two pistols menacingly, admitted he obtained the weapons from the museum.

He hid under Lincoln's bed and when everybody left, broke into one of the gun cases.

Uncovered Warrant for Dalton's Bared

Slack's Story of Early Kansas Could Have Been Averted
TULSA, Okla., — A warrant for the arrest of the three Dalton brothers and five of their companions who blazed a trail of stage, robbery and bank robberies across Oklahoma and Kansas is now in the hands of a Tulsa grand jury.

The warrant served its purpose, the bloody end of the Dalton gang at Coffeyville, Kan., might never have occurred. The paper shows that a U. S. deputy marshal was sent from place to place for two months in an effort to serve the warrant, which charged the gang with the $11,000 robbery of a Wells Fargo Express company office at Red Bank, Okla.

Dill (Dillon), whose reputation as a competent law officer was widespread, was headed the warrant by U. S. commissioners for the Oklahoma territory in August, 1932. What happened during the next two months is not known but a report circulated on the warrant and Dalton's name.

On October 5, 1932, the Daltons and Emmett Dalton, Bob and Emmett Dalton, the First National bank and a bank with $22,000. At the same time Grat Dalton, with his brother Emmett Dalton, and Dick Broadwell, went to the Condon National bank. There a teller shot them long enough for Coffeyville citizens to be alerted.
A party of vigilantes surrounded the bank and the Daltons were trapped. Powers and Broadwell reached their horses, mounted but were cut down before they could get away.
In the same alley, Bob and Grat Dalton were killed with bullets as they vainly tried to reach their horses. Emmett Dalton, still in his jeans, was wounded seriously.
Today, Coffeyville residents show visitors the alley where the famous shooting match took place.

Play safe—drive carefully.

YOUR PILOT

An experienced Sea Captain might be able to bring his ship into almost any big port in the world. But even captains who are making frequent and regular runs between two ports usually pick up a pilot before coming into the harbor.

The Pilot has given years of study to his particular waters, he knows the channels, the tides, the influences of the wind and cross currents. He earns his fee by saving time and reducing the danger of mishaps.

Anyone with business experience might well think he could work out his own program of insurance protection without assistance from a trained and experienced insurance agent. But the successful and careful man prefers to have an insurance expert of long experience do this for him. LET US SERVE AS YOUR INSURANCE PILOT.
